

Age Appropriate Communication

Infants to 8 Years
Program Topic Area: Child Growth and Development

This training program is approved by the North Carolina Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Child Development and is categorized under: Child Growth and Development (5 Contact Hours)

This training will help participants understand the difference between age appropriate communication and individual appropriateness. Participants will strengthen their knowledge base in understanding all areas of child development relating to giving specific instructions, being understood, hearing, being heard and establishing a meaningful and productive relationship with each child.

Participants will:

1. Explore specific behavior patterns that affect age appropriate communication that will help children use language in meaningful ways.
2. Identify principles and practices for children who may be challenged with learning and/or behavior problems.

Prime Time Together with Young Children

Let's Have Fun and Do Something Different!
Infants to 8 Years

This training program is approved by the North Carolina Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Child Development and is categorized under: Children's Physical and Intellectual Development; Children's Social and Emotional Development. (5 Contact Hours)

In the course of day to day experiences with young children, it's easy for teachers to see that spontaneous activities are a natural way of learning. Participants will learn how to encourage children's creativity by planning a daily schedule that will give them many opportunities to observe, explore and create at their own pace.

Participants will:

1. Be presented with helpful ideas that will address the physical, intellectual, social and emotional domains of a child's development to enhance effectiveness in their daily lesson planning.
2. Develop innovative techniques that will encourage children's creativity through group singing and movement activities.
